Entry of Amendment

Applicant's amendment filed on April 10, 2006<sup>1</sup> and rec'd on April 17, LOJ is acknowledged. Claims 1-24 are currently pending.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed April 10, 2006 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. The flexibility of a mattress (applicator) is inherent in its design and use and the added intended use recited in amended claim 1 does not further limit the structure of the device. Therefore, the rejection from the prior Office action is repeated below.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1, 2, 4-11, 15-17 and 19-24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Augustine et al. (6,497,720). Augustine et al. disclose a device for releasing physical parameters (heat or cold) and for applying to body or body parts, comprising:

Art Unit: 3739

an applicator (fluid mattress) having at least two layers defining a space therebetween (Figures 1-7) with at least two closed chambers or separate zones laterally adjacent one another, each channel or chamber independently and individually fillable with fluidic media for independently and individually cooling the patient's body;

a control device connected to the applicator for controlling the pressure (thus flow) and temperature of the fluid media in the space, wherein the control device is connected to valves in feed lines for the fluidic media for controlling a flow through volume of the fluidic media; and pressure sensors (39) connected to the control device with feedback to the controller to maintain the pressure of the fluid media within the chambers as required and inherently comprises temperature sensors or thermostats for controlling the temperature of the fluidic media; wherein the chambers are connected via closable openings; wherein the chambers are disposed next to one another; wherein at least one of the layers (Figure 8, mesh 86) is permeable and channels leading to the chambers are impermeable to the fluid media in the chambers and at least one chamber or channel is averted from the body part, and at least one channel is disposed at a layer of the applicator facing the body part (col. 5, line 26-col. 7, line 15 and col. 8, lines 5-56).

Further to claims 21- 22, Augustine et al disclose the layers of the applicator of made of polyvinyl films (inherently flexible and col. 6, line 45).

Art Unit: 3739

Further to claims 23-24, Augustine et al disclose the applicator is disposed in a frame (85) surrounding the body at least partially and wherein the sensors (39) are disposed inside the frame.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 3 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Augustine et al. who fail to disclose an EKG output is monitored as a body parameter. However, the examiner maintains that such a monitoring is typically provided as important information to an operator or medical personnel during or that at the time of the invention it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify the device of Augustine et al. to include EKG monitoring.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 12-14 and 18 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
